

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for communicating between a group of members includes identifying a group of selected members, assigning the members of the selected group to an exclusive communication channel, initiating communication without the need for a dialing mechanism, and communicating between members of the selected group over the exclusive communication channel. A communication system used to communicate between selected members includes user nodes, access points, and routers.

2010 RELEASE UNDER E.O. 14176